

"Information You Can Trust"

Looking for Full Text?

While searching in an electronic database you might find a citation and abstract, but not the full text version of an article. Here are two search strategies for finding full text articles: 1) Check if the library owns the journal and 2) Check if the journal is available in full text electronic format.

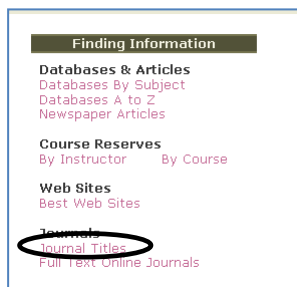

Check if the library owns the journal (Here are two variations A and B)

A. When you see a note "This title held by a SWITCH Library. Please check TOPCAT" you need to follow these four steps:

Radon and rock deformation. By: Roeloffs, Evelyn. Nature, 5/13/99, Vol. 399 Issue 6732 p104 2p 1 diagram 1 graph: (AN 1873642)
Notes: This title held by a SWITCH Library. Please check TOPCAT.

1. Copy the journal title from the citation to the clipboard. In the example above, the journal title is Nature.

2. Open another session of your browser and navigate to the library web page. Click on Journal Titles.

3. Paste the entry into the Journal Title search box and click the Search TOPCAT button.

Search for books, magazines, CDs, video tapes, DVDs and more.

Check if the journal is available from the library in full text

The library subscribes to many full text online journals. Checking if the journal in a citation is available in full text is easy. Suppose you were searching the Web and came across this hit asking you to pay for full text access to an article:

Native American disease history: past, present and future directions - group of 3 »
A Ramenofsky - World Archaeology, 2003 - Taylor & Francis

Don't pay for an article! Check to see if it is available in full text from the library by following the steps below:

1. Copy the journal title from the citation to the clipboard. In the citation above the journal title is World Archaeology. The specific issue is from October, 2003.

2. Open a new browser session and navigate to the library web page. Click the Full Text Online Journals link on the library web page.

3. Paste the contents of the clipboard into the "Title begins with" search box and click the Search button.
